COUNCIL REPORTS CHANGE IN STREET WIDENING PLANS

The first regular meeting of the City Council for the new year was held Monday evening, January 11, all members answering the roll call and Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

A communication was received from the Market Street Railway Company, asking for the yearly renewal of their blasting permit in Daly City, and the permit was renewed.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company requested permiscion to open a trench and lay a 2-inch gas main therein, beginning at a point in Eighty-eighth street 42 feet south of the north line and approximately 200 feet west of Railroad avenue, thence running in an easterly direction a distance of 90 feet, to supply a consumer. Permission was granted and the work will be under the supervision of the superintendent of streets.

A communication was received from a resident of Castle Gardens Tract, asking permission to plant trees in the sidewalk area. This request was referred to the City Planning Commission.

The proposed bond election and proposed changes in the street widening came in for considerable discussion and explanation.

The principal changes from the original plans are to widen on the east side instead of on the west side, at the top of the hill, and to make Mission street 132 feet wide instead of 100 feet, at this point, which is from Knowles avenue to Bepler street, and the moving of the Bank to provide for a widening of 100 feet on San Jose Avenue, instead of 80 feet as originally planned.

This change, which will provide three lanes for traffic, ample space for safety stations, space for parking and added width of sidewalks, in the main business section on the hill, was worked out as the result of study and plans of the City Council, and can be done without added expense.

An effort is being made to work out a plan to widen the highway to 132 feet in the Colma section.

A resolution was passed recommending that an additional eight feet be added to Mission street at all other points, and San Jose avenue, to provide space for safety zones, and that saftey zones be constructed at all main car stops. The resolution also expressed the proposal of the City Council to call a bond election for $25,000, to pay a part of the expense of this added width and improvement, providing that, if the bonds should be voted, Daly City would pay that amount toward the improvement, if the other interested parties would contribute the balance.

A bond issue of $25,000 would mean an additional tax rate of about 4 to 5 cents per $100, to pay the interest until 1939, at which time the original $100,000 water bond issue will be fully paid.

With that issue of the water bond paid, and no further tax necessary for that purpose, the street widening bonds would then be redeemed over a period of ten years, with a tax rate at an average of about 8 cents per $100.

For a home with an assessed valuation of $750, this would mean a total cost of approximately $8, distributed over about fifteen years.

This proposal for additional widening and safety stations seems to meet with the approval of all who have given the matter consideration.

Another false alarm was turned in to the fire department Monday evening. The turning in of alarms of this kind is a very serious offense, and for some time the Council has offered a $25 reward for any person caught violating this rule. Monday evening the Council raised the reward to $50.

DESPONDENT PAINTER ENDS LIFE IN COLMA

The body of a suicide found last Sunday night in the wash-room of a Colma service station has been identified as that of Elmer Young, 52, a painter, whose home was at 34 Rae street, San Francisco. Identification was made by a daughter, Mrs. Hazel Clark, shortly before an inquest held at the office of Deputy Coroner Luella Pepper, in Daly City, which found that Young came to his death as the result of a self-inflicted gunshot. The unfortunate man had been without employment for the past eight months and was desperate over his financial situation, the daughter told Dr. J. C. McGovern, who conducted the inquest.

Al Rossi, attendant at the station on Mission road near Vail street, found Young in the wash-room with a bullet wound in the right temple and a revolver near by. Search of the dead man's effects revealed no notes bearing on the suicide.

VETERAN FIREMEN INSTALL OFFICERS

The regular meeting date of the Veteran Firemen's Association fell on New Year's day, so it was postponed until one week later, January 8.

President Comrade William Goldkuhl presided and there was an unusually large attendance. Business of great importance was transacted, and books of the new constitution and by-laws were distributed to the members. Ed. Phul, one of the first members of Company No. 2, of the Vista Grande Fire Department, was initiated and signed the roll.

The annual reports of the financial secretary and treasurer were read and placed on file. The auditing committee highly commended these two officers on their extreme accuracy and efficiency in handling the funds of the Association during the past year.

Under the head of new business the newly elected officers were installed. Comrade Arthur Bodien acted as installing officer, and Comrade Gus Shenck was the installing marshal.

The following officers were installed: Comrade Andy Chesney, president; Comrade Jim Callan, first vice-president; Comrade A. Rickman, second vice-president; Comrade Ed Ford, secretary; Comrade Al Green, treasurer; Comrade H. H. Smith, chaplain; and Comrade Emil Forsell, marshal.

The board of directors, consisting of the five past presidents, Comrades Fritz Hansen, Lary Shaw, Al Green, Julius Twesten, and Andrew Vireno, were also installed in office.

The newly elected president called upon his corps of officers for a few remarks, and they responded readily. Comrade William Goldkuhl, junior past president, thanked the membership and his officers for their hearty co-operation during his term of office. Comrade Henry Sundermann complimented the members of the Association for the comradely spirit displayed at their meetings.

The commissary department will be in charge of Comrade William Goldkul for the ensuing year, and he will have an opportunity to display his culinary art.

After the business meeting the usual refreshments were served, and everyone present seemingly enjoyed themselves immensely.

ENTERTAINS MEMBERS OF LADIES HOME CLUB

The president of the Ladies' Home Club, Mrs. Lillian Landini, entertained the members at luncheon at her home on Winchester street, on Tuesday, the afternoon being devoted to the activities of the Philanthropic section of the club. Those who enjoyed the president's hospitality were Mesdames Atkinson, Schomaker, Volkmann, Wight, Anderson, Yates, O'Kane, Schmidt, Tinges, Clay.

A card party and tea is planned for the afternoon of Tuesday, January 9, at 2 P. M., at the home of Mrs. Lillian Landini, of Winchester street, for the benefit of the Welfare section of the club. All ladies interested in the welfare of our district are most cordially welcome. Come and have an enjoyable afternoon, and make your reservations as early as possible with the president of the Ladies' Home Club, Mrs. Lillian Landini, 408 Winchester street.

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT GUEST OF CROCKER P. T. A.

Last Tuesday afternoon the members of the Crocker Parent-Teachers' Association held their regular monthly meeting in their club rooms at 12 Wellington avenue. The guest speaker was Miss Pansy Abbott, county superintendent of schools, her subject being "Safety," and the Washington Bicentennial. Mr. R. L. Crane also gave a short address, he being followed by Miss Suber, principal of the Crocker school.

At the close of a very busy and interesting meeting the group adjourned to partake of refreshments, served by Mrs. Gertrude Walker, assisted by her committee.

The next meeting of the Association will be held Tuesday evening, February 9, when Fathers' Night and Founders' Day program will be celebrated together.

LEGION APPROVES RELIEF MEASURES

The members of Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, held a very interesting meeting last Friday evening, January 8, at Eagles Hall.

Relief measures and the bonus question were among the important subjects considered. Following the example of other Posts in the county, Daly City Post went on record as favoring the immediate payment of the bonus in full, to relieve the suffering among the ex-service men and their families. Relief will be extended through the Daly City Welfore Board.

The social committee announces another dance and social, to be held on Friday evening, January 22, at Eagles Hall. Music will be furnished by "Doc" and his haywire orchestra. Bring your friends. A good time is assured all.

Comrade Harrison was the victim of a holdup one evening last week. He was just about ready to fork over his money when the bandits were scared away, making a hasty retreat. Comrade Harrison said that the muzzle of the gun pointed at his chin seemed to be about 3 inches in diameter.

CELEBRATE TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. R. Brauns, of 165 Miriam street, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding last Saturday evening, January 12. About forty friends of the happy couple met at the Brauns home to extend their congratulations and enjoyed an evening of music and games, followed by tempting refreshments. One of the features of the evening was a mock wedding, Mr. R. Steinbach performing the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Brauns were the recipients of many gifts in honor of the occasion.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. W. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. F. Darragh, Mr. and Mrs. F. Schmidt, Mr. R. Steinbach and daughter Marie, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wright, Mr. and Mrs. A. Brauns, Jr., and Miss Gertrude Brauns.

NATIONAL FOREST CAMP GROUNDS ARE POPULAR

The 1,252 designated camp grounds in the eighteen national forests of the California region were used during the vacation season of 1931 by 1,588,328 campers and picnickers, according to a report just issued by Regional Forester S. B. Snow. The heaviest maximum use on any one day was 68,746 people.

These figures do not include guests at fifteen municipal and county camps maintained by eight cities and two counties, seventy-five camps belonging to clubs and fraternal organizations, and private camps in the California National Forests.

SLIGHT DECLINE IN TAX PAYMENT

San Mateo county has set a record in the state for the collection of the first installment of taxes during the year, with only a loss of one and three-tenths per cent over last year.

This, according to County Auditor Edward M. Stack, is one of the smallest, if not the smallest, losses of any county in the state.

Auditor Stack said the high percentage of collections was marked indication that this county has fared exceedingly well in face of economic stress so prevalent in other sections. He reported that last year first installment paid were 93.9 per cent of the charge, while this year payments reached 92.6 per cent. The second installments will not be due for some time.

One of the striking things revealed in connection with the apportionment of county taxes was that schools and county charities take 60 per cent of the whole first installment as their quota. The installment amounted to $1,523,113, of which $46,643 were personal property taxes.

From the total of $1,523,113, county schools get more than $846,000, while three county charities, Community hospital, the relief home and Social Service Commission, get nearly 125,000, making a total of more than $950,000.

From the remaining $600,000 of tax money, $80,000 is for roads, and $112,000 for salaries. An additional $6,000 will be used for the Sunnyvale air base contribution.

Getting back to schools, which are by far the biggest item in the county tax budget, elementary schools receive more than $268,000 for maintenace, while high schools and junior college get more than $300,000 for operation expenses. Added to this figure is $178,374 which is applied on school bonds.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE PARTY

Angelo Ditty, Sr., of San Diego avenue, was guest of honor last Saturday evening at a birthday surprise party given at his home by his wife, Mrs. Edna Ditty, and brother, Peter Ditty. The home was prettily decorated in crepe paper and flowers for the occasion. Mr. Ditty was the recipient of many lovely gifts. The evening was spent in dancing to music furnished by Emil Ferrera and Aldo Risso, after which a buffet supper was served to the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Terry, Mr. and Mrs. Theo Puneas, Mr. and Mrs. J. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. A. Finley, Mrs. U. Dimos, Mrs. Whitehead, Mrs. John Haskins and mother, Mrs. Haskins, Miss Emma Jane Haskins, Miss Betty Cavagna, Miss Gerths, Miss Frances Green, Miss Lucille Melgargi, Miss Rose White, Miss Ellen White, Mrs. Rose Johnson, Miss Ellen Castiglione, Miss Pauline Heldobler, Miss Betty Stewart, Miss Ruth Bentley, Miss Virginia McKellup, Messrs. Angelo Ditty, Jr., Guy Tesh, Henry Castro, Bob Castro, Bob McKellup, Andy McKellup, Jack, Joe and John Santly, Charles Rocco, Frank Baisa, Arthur Trinei and Elmer Meyer.

KERSEY TO VISIT JEFFERSON HIGH

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Vierling Kersey will visit the high school on the evening of February 10. The occasion will be the Parents' Night at Jefferson. An interesting program will be prepared, consisting of short musical selections by the chorus and band, a brief address by Mr. Kersey, and a rapid-fire program of the regular school work in which the parents will go through the schedule of classes of their children. This is for the purpose of giving parents the opportunity of meeting all of the teachers and having the work of the school explained to them, so that the home and school may co-operate more effectively in the interests of the education of the boys and girls. The Parent-Teachers' Association will serve refreshments free to everyone. This has been made possible by the co-operation of the executive committee of the student body. The students are happy to provide out of student body funds the necessary refreshments for their "parents' party" on this occasion. Mr. Kersey will be happy to meet personally during the evening every parent and patron of the high school.

The fool school burglar again visited the Jefferson Union high school during last week end. Entering the building through the basement, he broke the glass in the office door and made an effort to force open the door of the safe. In this he was unsuccessful. He got nothing for his pains, but left behind a number of finger prints and other marks of identification which were taken by the police department to work upon in co-operation with the sheriff's office.

On two previous occasions the high school building was burglarized, and the culprits caught through the alertness of Chief Doyle. The board of trustees may be forced to change its policy of leniency and hereafter allow the law to take its course. Such burglaries are always the work of amateurs. Schools do not keep any money in their vaults, and professionals know that if they did succeed in breaking in, they would get nothing for their pains. Besides, Jefferson High keeps important legal documents in the vaults of one of the local banks.

The new student body officers for the spring term are: Paul Green, president; Creighton Davies, vice-president; Mary Conti, secretary; Marian Hackley, treasurer; Leo Flanagan, judge; Bob Cota, cheer leader; Pete Pastorino, sergeant-at-arms.

Augie Gaggero, 210 pound center of Jefferson's football team during the past two years, has been elected captain for the coming season. In all of the games, Augie has never had "time out" called for him. He is cool under fire, and should make a fine leader for the Indians.

In a vocabulary test of 150 words given last week by Miss Burfield to the upper-classmen, Kathleen Caine, a Junior, received the highest grade of 79 per cent, with 118 words correct. Virginia Archer, a Senior, was second with 74 per cent, or 111 words. Leo Flanagan, a Senior, was third with 70 per cent, of 106 words right. These students have received a grade equivalent to that of college Freshmen, the average college Freshmen usually receiving a grade of 105, or 70 per cent of the 150 words.

Urgent requests are being received by Principal Ferguson for the organization of a class in United States Citizenship. Five have made application, but a minimum of ten is required. All foreign born residents, either men or women, who are interested in becoming citizens of the United States should register with Mr. Ferguson, so that the class may start as soon as possible. A class in stenography will also be organized as soon as the required number register.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL NOTES OF INTEREST

Mr. Mathews, Physical Education director, has been busy since the opening of the spring term organizing and planning for the groups who will take care of the sports for this year.

The different groups for Colma and Crocker have chosen names which should put fear into the enemy. Colma has chosen Yanks, Broncos, and Terrors, and Crocker's fighters are Mohawks, Savages, Wild Cats, Giants and Tigers.

The students of Woodrow Wilson have not yet completed their plans, but have selected the following captains for groups: Henry Mendola, Tony De Maria, George Ragglianti, Natchie Mendola and Roy McLean.

The plans and dates for basketball, baseball and track have been set and need only the O. K. of Mr. Crane, the District Superintendent, to make them complete.

SUPERVISORS TO PROVIDE STREET WIDENING FUND

The San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday appropriated $12,500 to aid in the acquisition of rights of way needed for the elimination of the "bottleneck" on El Camino Real in Daly City. The proposed widening will cost when completed about $700,000, the board was told. Daly City, San Mateo county, the state and San Francisco are co-operating on the project.

Approval of the plans was given by the county planning commission, which recommended that the proposed highway be 108 feet wide instead of 100 feet, through the business district of Daly City and Colma, and that it be widened to 132 feet in the business sections. The additional eight feet was urged to provide safety stations at street car stops. The board will attempt to have all interested parties approve the additional width.

The members of the board of supervisors were summoned on Monday to meet with the grand jury in joint session on Wednesday, January 20, at 10 A. M. The request from the county's official investigators was mailed to every supervisor by the secretary.

The board heard a series of protests against the creation of a new utility district to include Salada and Brighton beaches. The protestants claimed there was already one utility district, including Salada beach. The plan for the new district includes the territory of the old district, which protestants claim is illegal. After much discussion between counsel for the various factions, the matter was delayed for one week pending an opinion from District Attorney Edmund Scott as to whether or not the proposed new district is legal.

The South San Francisco Chamber of Commerce memorialized the board of supervisors for a reduction next year in county expenditures as a means of lowering the tax rate. The memorial was signed by R. L. Spangler, secretary of the chamber.

Supervisor C. V. Thompson of Burlingame sponsored a resolution passed by the board urging the California State Chamber of Commerce to again intercede with the state highway department to have the San Joaquin-to-the-Sea highway made a part of the state's secondary road program. The improvement was inaugurated last year.

DALY CITY TO HAVE NEW SCOUT TROOP

The Daly City District Council has completed plans for the formation of a new troop of Boy Scouts within the Daly City district.

Boys over 12 years of age are eligible to membership in this new troop. Those who desire to join this troop, apply at P. T. A. meeting hall, 12 Wellington avenue, opposite the City Hall, any Thursday evening from 7 to 9 o'clock, where they will find a Scoutmaster on duty to register applicants.

Any person wishing information concerning the Boy Scout movement may communicate with the following officers of the local Council, Daly City District No. 12, Boy Scouts of America: District Commissioner, L. W. Johnston, 140 Los Banos avenue, Randolph 3356; Chairman of Local Council, A. J. Bodien, 28 Rice street, Randolph 4479; Secretary of Local Council, H. A. McHugh, 247 Oliver street, Delaware 7625.

POLICE RECOVER WATCH STOLEN IN DECEMBER, 1928

Last Friday night Officer Sunderland arrested George Joseph Rice, aged 30, a sausage maker and a native of Massachusetts, on a charge of vagrancy. After Rice was taken to jail, it was found that he had in his possession an open-faced 15-jewel green gold watch. The works and case number were broadcast over the radio. It was found as a result of the broadcast that the watch had been stolen from a resident of Lakeport, in Lake county, on December 28, 1928. Chief of Police Doyle communicated with the sheriff at Lakeport, but the sheriff could not identify the owner as the theft had occurred during the term of his predecessor, who had passed away.

Rice appeared before Judge Ellis C. Johnson last Monday morning and was sentenced to ten days in the county jail, pending further investigation.

Hail pelted peninsula cities Tuesday, driving pedestrians to cover and whitening the pavements of San Mateo and Burlingame, shortly after noon. Snow also mingled with the hail, which bounded on sidewalks and piled up in gutters along the streets.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

Fire loss in Eureka during the past year totaled $116,886.50, according to Fire Chief A. D. Pettingill.

County Clerk C. C. Eastin announced 366 couples obtained marriage licenses in Stanislaus County for 1931. This is 65 less than in 1930.

Every time a person died in Modesto in 1931 there were two born to take his or her place. Births in Modesto last year totaled 602, deaths less than 300.

Unusual activity by the stork during the first eleven months of 1931 showed a total of 638 births in Humboldt County for that period. Deaths for the same period were 489.

California architects will collect more than $120,000 in fees for preparing plans and specifications for various public buildings throughout the State, according to advices received in Oakland from Washington, D. C.

The University of California ended 1931 with building projects representing a total investment of $7,000,000 either completed or under way on its five camp, a report issued recently by Comptroller Luther A. Nichols shows.

Regarded as a major economy step by an estimated saving of $593,129 in relieving congestion at State institutions, and marking the biggest deportation program in California history, a total of 182 mental wards and 218 juvenile delinquents were returned to their home States during 1931.

The State Judicial Council has announced the assignment of three outside judges to serve during the new year in special sessions of the Superior Court in Santa Barbara county, designating Superior Judges Henderson, Ventura county; Norton, San Luis Obispo county, and Jorgensen, Monterey county, for such work. In turn Judges Crow and Bigler of Santa Barbara county were designated to serve in Ventura, San Luis Obispo and Monterey counties.

Ram Nath Puri, fruit ranch owner of the Orangevale district near Roseville, will leave soon on a trade development tour of India, his native land. He will be a member of the American trade expedition, which has for its purpose the development of markets in India and other oriental lands for California fruits. Puri, who belongs to the ruling caste of India, has lived in California more than twenty-five years.

Total valuation of all agricultural crops in Kern county for the year of 1931 was $11,314,731, according to County Agricultural Commissioner Burtch. The total is a decrease in valuation of approximately $2,000,000, due solely, declared Burtch, to the low prices to which all commodities have fallen during that period. Acreage and production of crops were up to normal. Grapes were the leading crop for Kern, with cotton second, and alfalfa and potatoes next in order.

Development of a cotton-picking machine may be perfected at University of California, it has been announced. One machine, designated by the university scientists is 83 per cent efficient, removing cotton from ripe plants at a rate similar to that of fifty or sixty hand pickers. "Tests indicate that persistent study and effort may yet produce a successful mechanical cotton picker," Prof. H. B. Walker reported. Eight hundred picking fingers are mounted on two cylinders. The cylinders rotate at the rate of 3,000 revolutions per minute. A rear pair of cylinders cleans what cotton is left by the first pair of cylinders. The machine moves forward at the rate of about three miles per hour.

The State of California assumes full responsibility for suppression of the citrus white fly pest, recently discovered at Santa Ana and the vicinity immediately to the southward, according to a letter received at Anaheim from State Director of Agriculture Moulton, by State Highway Commissioner Stanton. Moulton spent a day in the county recently, and on his return to Sacramento conferred with Gov. Rolph on the situation. Already more than $12,000 in State funds have been used in the fight, and $60,000 more has been made available for the battle. Moulton reported in his letter that he believes the officials in charge of the campaign for eradication of the pest have it virtually conquered. He lauded the county supervisors and County Horticultural Commissioner Brock for their prompt action leading to stamping out the menace. No county or industrial funds are sought or desired in the campaign, Moulton declared.

Approximately five per cent of pedestrians killed by automobiles in 1930 lost their lives while crossing intersections against a traffic signal, according to figures received by the California State Automobile Association.

Changes in the setup of the State Department of Motor Vehicles, announced recently, displaced two bureau heads, J. J. Borree, chief of the bureau of officers' training, and Arthur Tindell, head of the bureau of equipment, maintenance and supplies.

California is to benefit materially by the current period of depression, State Director of Finance Vandegrift said recently, through many development projects completed by the State and public utilities. The director "looked around the corner" and predicted lowered utility rates will result from the many improvements he said the utilities have been making during the period of reduced material and labor costs. "When California begins to recover," Vandegrift said, "it will benefit by the improvement established during the period of depression and will make rapid advancements during the coming years." He said natural gas lines linking Kettleman Hills with San Francisco will provide cheap industrial fuel enabling manufacturing concerns to compete with eastern rivals. One electric corporation has during the depression period expanded greatly its capital outlay, the director said, citing the erection of a huge steam plant at Seal Beach as an example. High tension lines extended throughout the northern part of the State and construction of power dams north and south are, in his opinion, to result in cheaper electrical rates. The State Division of Water Resources has on file applications for construction of $19,000,000 worth of dams in all parts of California, Vandegrift said, adding that these proposed projects will result in further power rate reductions. "Port facilities at San Francisco, Oakland, Richmond, and Berkeley have been expanded to take care of potential increases. They have been more than doubled. Los Angeles is fostering the establishment of a unified port taking in the facilities of Los Angeles and Long Beach Harbor." Speaking of the State's part in this progressive program, Vandegrift cited floating of a $6,000,000 park bond issue and acquisition of beach lands, thus improving coastline scenic attractions from San Diego to San Cruz counties. He mentioned acquisition of mountain parks, particularly in the Mount Diablo and San Jacinto areas. The program of the State Department of Public Works included improvement of 800 miles of roads. The State has built twenty-two public buildings, Vandegrift said, many of them started within the current year. These include the $12,000,000 State office building at Los Angeles and addition of wings to the San Francisco State building. "Considering the future," Vandegrift concluded, "I expect to see California sell many products in competition with manufacturers of other States and countries. We are building for the future."

The State library system and various California newspapers were commended by Gov. Rolph for sending copies of papers to the State labor camps for unemployed men throughout the state. "This is a purely voluntary act on the part of the publishers, but it is typical of the splendid support given the labor-camp movement by newspapers generally," the Governor declared. "The men at these camps more than 1000 of them, are working for their board and lodging. When rainy weather forces them indoors, a few copies of newspapers are a real godsend to them."

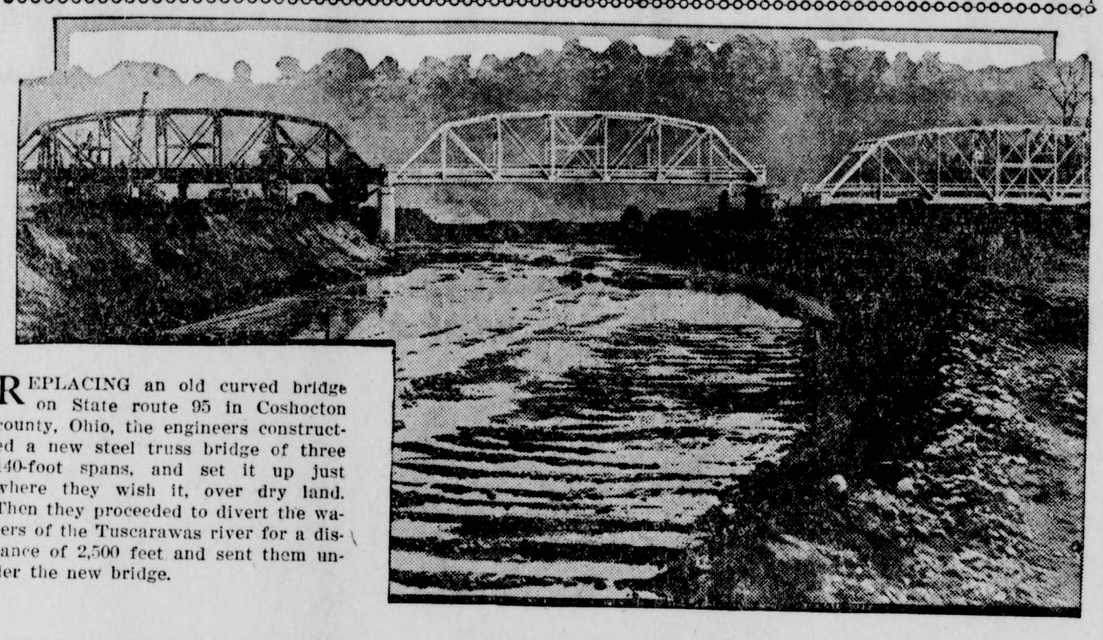
California spent more money on its schools during 1930-31 than during the previous year, but the average cost per pupil in average daily attendance was lower. This was shown in a recent report made by State Superintendent Kersey to Gov. Rolph. Total expenditures of school districts for 1930-31 were $153,168,453.16 compared with $149,951,679.37, the year before. The averages per pupil were $156.64 and $159.23, respectively. Total State enrollment in all grades, from kindergarten to junior college, was 1,457,831 this year, and 1,407,190 last year, the increase being 3.6 per cent. The average daily attendance figures were 977,863 for this year and 941,738 last year, an increase of 3.84 per cent during the period. This army of children was taught and supervised by 47,418 teachers and other school employees this year, the number increasing 3.5 per cent since last year.

The winter increase in crime, expected by some because of general economic conditions, has failed to materialize, said Clarence S. Morrill, superintendent of the State Bureau of Criminal Identification. Records of the bureau showed the number of fingerprints received from California arrests in November was only 2 per cent more than during October, and 20 per cent less than those received in November last year. A slight decrease in the number of identifications made led Morrill to believe a slightly larger proportion of the criminals fingerprinted were newcomers to the state. Morrill also said it was interesting to note that the number of felony crime reports received in November was less than for October, and 20 per cent under the figure for November, 1930. "While a portion of this increase may be due to fluctuation in the number of police departments reporting, it is safe to believe that increased police efficiency and adequate relief measures are preventing what might easily otherwise become a serious situation," Morrill said.

Although no definite course of action has been determined, all Ventura county school-teachers who have outside sources of support may be requested to give up their positions, Mrs. Blanche T. Reynolds, superintendent of public schools in Ventura county, said recently.

Contract for the construction of four new buildings at the Veterans' Home at Yountville has been awarded to R. W. Littlefield, Oakland, for $407,245, by the State Department of Public Works.

They Brought the River to This Bridge



REPLACING an old curved bridge on State route 95 in Coshocton county, Ohio, the engineers constructed a new steel truss bridge of three 140-foot spans, and set it up just where they wish it, over dry land. Then they proceeded to divert the waters of the Tuscarawas river for a distance of 2,500 feet and sent them under the new bridge.

THE CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

HARDLY had Peter Rabbit left Whitefoot the Woodmouse when he discovered some new tracks in the snow, and right away he was all curiosity.

"Now whose can these be, I wonder?" thought he.

They were quite different from the tiny tracks of Whitefoot. In the first place they were so much larger. Then, too, they were quite far apart in little groups of four, two little round ones and two quite long ones.

"Of course," said Peter to himself, "the little ones are the prints of front feet, and the long ones are the prints of hind feet. They are just a little like my own prints, only not so big. I guess I'll follow them and see where they lead to."

So Peter started off lipperty-lipperty-lip, for these tracks were very easy to follow. He had followed them quite a distance without discovering anybody when he happened to look back at his own tracks. Then he stopped abruptly and sat up. First he looked at his own tracks and then he looked at the other tracks, and a very foolish look crept over his face. He had noticed what he had quite forgotten and this was that in hopping he puts his hind feet down in front of his fore feet so that anyone who didn't know that would think from his tracks that he was going in just the opposite direction from what he was. He looked a little closer at the tracks he had been following and now he could see the marks of toenails. Whoever had made those tracks did just as he did, put the hind feet down in front of the forefeet, and here he had been following them in the wrong direction. No wonder he didn't catch up with any one. My, how foolish Peter did feel! He looked this way and that way to make sure that no one had seen what he had been doing, and then he turned about and started back the way he had come as fast as he could go.

When he reached the place where he had first begun to follow the tracks he kept right on. Presently he came to a place where some one had dug down through the snow. Right beside the little hole was an empty nutshell. Peter stopped and right away he lost all interest. "Pooh!" he exclaimed, "I'm not going to waste my time following those tracks any farther. They were made by Happy Jack Squirrel, and he's at home in bed now. Funny I didn't think of him before. Next time I see his tracks I'll know them so perhaps my time hasn't been wholly wasted."

With this Peter once more went looking for tracks, and he didn't have far to look. This time they were big round tracks in a single row. Peter took one good look at them and that was enough.

"Reddy Fox!" he exclaimed under his breath. "This is no place for me if he is about. There is one good thing, and that is they head away from where I have been. I hope he won't take it into his head to come over this way."

Making the longest jumps he knew how, Peter hurried off to another part of the Green Forest, and there presently he forgot all about Reddy Fox in his interest in another set of tracks. These were in a double row, and it was very plain to Peter that whoever made them was in no great hurry. He followed them, and presently came to an old stump with a hole under it. The track led straight down into that hole and none came out. Peter grinned.

"So this is where Jimmy Skunk is spending the winter," said he. "I've wondered a good many times where Jimmy's winter home could be, and now I know. This snow is certainly fine for finding out secrets. I certainly am learning things tonight. Now I'll see whom else I can learn about."

And, kicking his long heels together for sheer joy, Peter started on to look for more tracks.

GRANDMOTHER'S BOOK

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I SEE Grandmother's finger yet
Tracing the verses line by line.
The light was poor, the print was fine,
The way the Bible once was set.
But little handicaps she met,
Spelled out the sentences divine,
When thine was always printed Thine
In an old-fashion alphabet.

The Book was hard on ancient eyes
But it was balm to hearts of old,
Before the Story was retold
And commentators grew too wise.
So much we now philosophize,
So much explain, so much unfold,
We hide the fabled streets of gold,
We shut the gates of Paradise.

Grandmother's Book is put away,
Grandmother's faith is half-forgot,
And if we're happier or not
Perhaps is not for me to say.
But I have just enough of gray,
Have known enough the common lot,
To long for—well, I don't know what,
But something from Grandmother's day.

Japanese Jonah and the Whale

THIS Japanese Jonah was not actually swallowed by the whale because he and his fellow-whalers had made the big fellow secure long before they got within reach of his jaws. The whaling industry is one of the foremost means of livelihood of the northern Japanese. The gigantic mammal in whose mouth this whaler is standing is of the "iwasi" or beef whale species. Its length varies from 60 to 90 feet and its weight from 16 to 24 tons. It is worth about $1,500 and the meat is regarded as a great delicacy by the natives.

THIS AND THAT

PLACE one teaspoonful of grated orange peel or lemon peel in the tea pot when making tea. It gives a delightful flavor and makes ordinary tea taste like the expensive teas.

Mild Rarebit.

Cut one-half pound of cheese into small bits. Sprinkle crumbs over the bottom of a buttered baking dish, cover with one-third of the cheese and seasonings, using one and two-thirds teaspoonfuls of salt, one-third teaspoonful of paprika; when the dish is full add one and one-half cupfuls of milk and set into a pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate oven thirty-five minutes.

Cheese Souffle.

Take three tablespoonfuls of quick cooking tapioca, cook in one cupful of milk until the tapioca is clear. Add one cupful of grated cheese, stir until melted, cool, add three beaten egg yolks, one teaspoonful of salt and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Place in a pan set in water and bake until the souffle is firm. Serve at once. This serves four.

Apple Souffle.

Add four and one-half tablespoonfuls of tapioca and a little salt to one cupful of scalded milk. Cook in a double boiler until the tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add one-half cupful of sugar, cool and add the beaten yolks of three eggs, one-half tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and one cupful of grated raw apple, fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and bake in ramekins or casserole set in water. Serve hot with sweetened whipped cream, flavored with almond.

Lines of Velvet Coat Models are Simplified

Velvet coats are finding favor with smartly dressed women.

A brown velvet model for formal afternoon wear is offered by Patou. The collars, cuffs and bottom are trimmed with brown astrakhan. The lining is of jade green.

The long simplified lines show a modification of the closer silhouette of fall styles. The tie fastening, however, allows the coat to be fitted in at the natural waistline.

A chic brown hat and brown shoes complete the ensemble.

Embroidered Crepes

A shop noted for the beauty of its fabrics is making a feature of crepes embroidered in all over design and created for the fashioning of blouses and knee length tunics to wear with plain color wool crepe skirts.

Here's the World's Rarest Bird

WHAT is said to be the world's rarest bird has been added to the collection of Gilbert Lee, famous Los Angeles agriculturist. The blue-rumped parrot, scientifically known as "Psittacus Insertus" and thought the only one of its kind in captivity, was recently brought by sailors from the uninhabited island off the Malay peninsula which is the only place in the world the bird is found. One other such bird was once brought to London but lived only a few days. The bird's length is 5½ inches. It has a red bill and green wings which are Chinese red underneath. Its head and rump are blue.

SCHOOLS TO COMPETE AT THE STATE FAIR

The schools of San Mateo county have just received the California State Fair public school premium offerings to be awarded at the 1932 fair, September 3 to 10. Work on the part of individual pupils, schools and classes for the exhibits in the educational department will begin early in the year.

Cash prizes for the educational department competition, exclusive of the junior agricultural and livestock division, total $4,700. In addition there are many trophies, medals and ribbons.

The school work to be exhibited ranges from kindergarten displays to elaborate projects of secondary school students, giving an opportunity to show virtually every type of work done in California's modern school system.

The competition will be both for individual work and for projects carried out by classes and by schools.

This year the exhibits of the continuation schools will be under the supervision of Emily G. Palmer, director of research and service, division of vocational education at the University of California. The exhibits will be expanded to show the complete range of occupations for which the continuation school students are training.

Under the leadership of Ellis Franklin, State Fair director in charge of the educational department, the size and scope of this department has grown to proportions which make it the greatest in any State Fair in the nation. It is one of the most fascinating of the California State Fair's features, attracting widespread interest and attention.

Mrs. Jane Amundsen, superintendent of educational exhibits, announces that the plans for the coming fair in this department will bring about expansions and a greater participation on the part of schools and individuals.

Premium books are now available to those who communicate with Charles W. Paine, secretary of the State Fair, Sacramento.

BLIND MAN GETS HIS DEER

How a blind man gets his deer is vouched for by a U. S. Forest ranger on the Kaibab National Forest in Arizona. According to the story the blind man is accompanied by a guide who sights a deer and then, without touching the rifle, directs the aim of the blind man, who shoots when the guide says "Ready." There are very few misses and the blind man gets his venison each season.

PROTECTING WILD LIFE POPULATION

Unemployment strikes into the ranks of Nature's wild living things as well as among the races of man, according to information received from the Division of Fish and Game.

Although the fact is not often contemplated, the wild birds and animals are constanly employed in foraging for the necessities that sustain life. When food sources are covered with snow and ice, or the season has failed to produce a sufficient crop, the wild living things can find no work to do—hence no food.

Drought followed by unusual heavy rains and snows has produced untold unemployment suffering among the wild life of our state, according to Division field men. These birds and animals must receive human assistance in order to survive until the productive days of spring.

Game wardens, volunteer deputy wardens and sportsmen from all parts of the state are doing all in their power to feed the wild life during this winter emergency period. Division officials say that excellent reports have come from the field men in Shasta, Siskiyou, El Dorado, Modoc, Lassen, Sonoma, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Kern, Madera and several other counties.

In feeding quail, both mountain and valley varieties, it is advised to use crecked grains, such as wheat, rolled oats and corn, and for seed use rape, vetch hemp and bur clover. Persons who care to donate feed for birds can secure information from Walter R. Welch, captain of volunteer deputies, Division of Fish and Game, 510 Russ building, San Francisco.

Grain should be placed in natural or artificial shelters at the edge of brush or wood patches, the shelters being arranged so that the birds may escape in any direction if attacked by enemies.

Full co-operation on the part of the nature loving public and generous feed donations will not only prevent suffering and starvation, Division officials declare, but will be an added protection to our wild life population.

FIRE LOSSES MOUNT

Damage set at close to a million and a half dollars was caused last year by forest and field fires in California. The total, as reported by D. H. Blood, State Director of Natural Resources, is more than three times the 1930 figure.

CALIFORNIA'S FIRE PROTECTION BUDGET

California's co-operative budget for fire protection on lands outside the National Forest is the largest of any state, with $764,940 in combined state, federal and private funds for fire control work in the fiscal year 1932, according to a report from the office of the chief forester of the U. S. Forest Service, Washington, D. C.

California's budget is composed of $161,298 from federal funds and $603,642 from state and private funds.

Funds aggregating $6,807,058 for preventing and suppressing forest fires have been made available for the 1932 fiscal year for the thirty-eight states and territories co-operating with the Forest Service under the Clarke-McNary law. Funds from state, federal and private sources make up the total, which shows a gain of $412,878 over the last fiscal year ending June 30, 1931.

A considerable proportion of the funds budgeted have already been expended since the beginning of the current fiscal year. Part of the money is used in the winter months in the construction of firebreaks, trails, lookout towers and telephone lines.

Let us hope that radio programs also reached their worst in 1931.

FEAR IS OUR CHIEF FOE

When the economic crash came in the fall of 1929 there were logical reasons for it to a certain extent, but not to the extent which panic-stricken speculators and others imagined. It is true that values had been inflated beyond reason, there had been over-production and over-buying, but calmness and sound judgment might have prevented the disaster which followed in the wake of a paralyzing fear which suddenly seized business and industy throughout the nation.

Now, with everything thoroughly deflated, production drastically curtailed, and millions in need of commodities which they can not earn the money to buy, fear still keeps capital hoarded away instead of being used to start the wheels of industry going again.

The unemployed can not buy; the employed will buy only necessaries, because of fear of losing their jobs; the manufacturer fears to borrow to resume operations because of the lack of a market; the banker would probably not lend anyway, through fear that the manufacturer would fail. Thus operates the vicious circle.

Yet, with an ever increasing population, the material needs of the country are greater than ever; intrinsic values have not been wiped out; forest, field and mine are ready to yield nature's gifts; factory and market place are prepared to function as before—but fear keeps timid though abundant capital from putting willing hands to work.

That such a situation should continue to exist simply doesn't make sense. Its continuance is a grave indictment against the thing we call civilization.

TEN MILES FROM BROADWAY

If a recent newspaper correspondent's story is to be believed, one of the most primitive settlements in America is only ten miles from Broadway. It is on what is known as Sour Island, in the Hackensack Meadows, New Jersey. This settlement, it is said, consists of thirty-two families, who have up to the present time lived without schools, churches, telephones, movies, running water, sidewalks, or any modern conveniences.

All the inhabitants know of New York City, only ten miles away, is the nightly glare of the electric lights in the sky. Once in awhile some of them visit the nearby village of Secaucus to make a few purchases, but otherwise they are as remote from civilization as if they lived on an island in the South Seas. Possibly they are as happy as the average New Yorker at that.

Farmers are said to have split over the question of relief. But they haven't had a great deal of relief to split.

AIR PROGRESS IN 1931

Many new records were set and numerous improved safety devices were developed to mark the progress of aeronautics during 1931. The completion and successful operation of the American-built Akron, world's largest airship, with a gas capacity of 6,500,000 cubic feet, was the outstanding aircraft engineering triumph of the year.

The greatest altitude ever attained my man was reached by two Frenchmen, Piccard and Kipfer, who rose 51,775 feet in an improved balloon. France also won the airplane distance record without refueling, 6,445 miles, made by LeBrix and Doret, flying in a closed circuit and returning to their starting point. But the longest airline non-stop distance flight, 5,012 miles, from Brooklyn to Istanbul, Turkey, was made by two Americans, Boardman and Polando.

The longest duration flight without refueling, 84 hours and 32 minutes, returning to the point of departure, was also made by two Americans, Lees and Brossy.

Among the new records for women made during the year were the following: Mme. Maryse Bastie of France, longest time in the air without refueling, 37 hours and 55 minutes. Misses Bobby Trout and Edna Cooper, Americans, made a record refueling flight of 123 hours. Three world records were made by Miss Ruth Nichols of Rye, N. Y., an altitude record of 28,743 feet; a speed record of 211 miles an hour, and an airline distance record of 1,978 miles.

A DISGRACE TO INTELLIGENCE

At the end of 1931, the National Safety Council said that it had become increasingly evident that the traffic toll would reach an all-time record of 35,000 fatalities for the year.

Here is a record that none of us want. It was within our power to prevent it last year, exactly as it is in our power to prevent the establishment of another grisly record of automobile deaths in 1932. Safety on the streets and highways comes as a result of the realization of the individual's duty to drive his car at all times in a prudent and intelligent manner. Carelessness, ignorance, drunkenness at the wheel, an irresponsible attitude, lack of ordinary courtesy—these things have caused practically all of the 35,000 deaths. The really unavoidable accident is extremely rare.

An informed and active public consciousness can do much. In nearly one-half of our cities united action on the part of public officials, civic organizatons and public-spirited citizens held the death rate in check. But in the remainder there has been a woeful spirit of apathy toward a problem that menaces the lives of us all.

We have entered a new year—a year of many problems. And we should reemember that one of the most important of these is to do our bit to promote the cause of carefulness and competence in automobile driving.

A PAIR OF BABY SHOES

Among the treasures in the Canadian archives at Ottawa is a pair of baby shoes once worn by James Wolfe. Most American school children have read in their histories story of how General Wolfe recited Gray's "Elegy in a Country Churchyard" the night before the battle of Quebec and said that he had rather be the author of the poem than to have the "glory of beating the French tomorrow."

He did beat the French on the morrow on the Plains of Abraham at Quebec, which victory wrested Canada from the French, but Wolfe died on the field after being thrice wounded. The opposing French commander, Montcalm, was also motally wounded in the battle.

Wolfe was one of the most skillful and daring commanders who ever wore the British uniform. He was a commissioned officer at the age of 14, became a Captain at 17, and a Major shortly after. He was a Brigadier General when he yielded up his life for England at the age of 31, after executing one of the most daring exploits in military annals. The story of the exploit is too long to relate here, but if our readers will look it up they will understand why the pair of baby shoes is so highly prized and treasured by the Dominion authorities in Ottawa.

TENNESSEE'S OLD TIMER

Although he does not claim to be the oldest man in America, A. E. Cantrell, of the Revilo community near Lawrenceburg, Tennessee, believes he is the oldest Mason. He is 109 years old and has been a Mason 85 years.

When Mr. Cantrell was born, in 1822, James Monroe was President; George IV was King of England, and Napoleon had been dead only a year. There were no railroads in the world, no revolvers, no sewing machines, no friction matches, and no electrical devices of practical use. The more modern inventions, such as the telephone, X-ray, phonograph, automobile, airplane, motion pictures, radio and television, were hardly dreamed of.

Yet he has lived to see all these developments, and not long ago he made a trip to Nashville, where he spoke over the radio. He expects to live to see many more new wonders, and hopes to exceed the age of his late brother, who died at the age of 116.

From reading about the Culbertson-Lentz contract bridge tournament we gather that an expert is one who makes what he bids at least 50 per cent of the time.

—This statement with facts: that statistics from the Census Department shows that the average number in an American family is four and one-fifth. We wonder if the one-fifth is father.

Another statement we'll back up is: that if we do the repair work on your car that it won't be done like a schoolboy washes his ears—we'll make a thorough job of it; and when we start on your job we don't waste our time looking for a wrench and then try to find a nut to fit the wrench.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

I note from the six thousand disabled emergency officers of the World war, who were retired some three years ago, that some five hundred of their number have died since that date. It is natural that the officers whould pass into the great beyond first, for at their entrance into the war, their average age was eight years older than the other soldiers.

That reminds me that it is rather difficult for those of the World war generation to realize how quickly the war is receding into history. Those citizens who had the privilege of service in the Army and Navy and who passed through the ordeal without making the supreme sacrifice, have since advanced life's road by a number of years which form a large per cent of man's allotted time on this sphere, and year by year the number of veterans grows less.

To our dead soldiers and sailors we owe a solmn duty—that of remembrance and help for their dependents.

To the living we also own an obligation. In hospitals, in their own homes, and everywhere in every walk of life can be found men suffering from war disabilities. The government should make life as easy and comfortable for each and every one of them as possible.

Those who would keep fragrant for all time the memories of those who have passed on and of our disabled war veterans and what we owe them, best think of the crimson poppy of Flanders, the emblem of sacrifice growing amid the rows of crosses. It will lead us all to understand. The poppy stands for fresh hopes for the dependents of the fallen and for our disabled who still linger with us.

Strangely and unfortunately, among our citizens there are a few people with weak minds and strong lungs who would like to make it appear as though our disabled veterans are all athletes and millionaires.

LOS ANGELES HAS MORE FOG THAN SAN FRANCISCO

One item of leadership that Southern California won't advertise to the world is that Los Anegels has more fog than San Francisco.

Throughout the past five years Los Angeles has had a yearly average of 910 foggy hours as against 803 in the city by the Golden Gate. The figures are official, coming from the Lighthouse Service of the United States Department of Commerce.

The facts came out in connection with a campaign to bring the Pacific Fleet more often to San Francisco Bay. Southern California opposed the idea, claiming that San Francisco fogs would prove a menace to navigation of the fleet. But they didn't get far with that argument. H. W. Rhodes, superintendent of lighthouses, cited official records to show that since 1927 there have been more hours of fog at the entrance to the Los Angeles harbor that at the Golden Gate—an average of 910 hours there and 803 hours here.

So now San Francisco Business, weekly publication of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, suggests that "Maybe we'll be able to sell our fog horn."

LEGION MEMBERSHIP GROWS

Membership in the American Legion in California is now 5,000 ahead of the same period last year, according to James K. Fisk, state adjutant. The figures now total 35,000 as compared with 30,877 for the same date last year. Before August, when the 1932 membership roles close, it is expected to reach 75,000, placing California high up in the state membership ranks of the organization.

A new means of identification through the use of X-ray photographs of the sinuses has been discovered.

While only a drop in the budget bucket, relatively, it is encouraging to see the administration's recommendation that the Federal Trade Commission's appropriation be cut $495,000 next year.

The first woman delegate to an international disarmament conference is Miss Mary Emma Woolley, president of Mount Holyoke College, named by President Hoover to attend the Geneva parley in February. She is 68 years old and has long been active in the cause of world peace. Her presence should have a steadying influence on the conference.

An unusual turkey story comes from Laurinburg, S. C., where W. L. Roper attempted to kill a holiday bird by sticking a knife into its brain through the mouth. According to the Associated Press, the turkey swallowed the knife, attacked Roper savagely, and then walked off.

Senator Gore, of Oklahoma, like most of us, is skeptical about those high salaried "farm relief" gentlemen, and says: "Mr. Milnor, head of the wheat corporation, receives $50,000 a year—used to get $10,000. Mr. Creekmore, head of the cotton organization, receives $75,000—used to get $12,000." It takes nearly 100,000 bushels of wheat to pay Milnor's salary, and nearly 3,000 500-pound bales of cotton to pay Creekmore's, at present prices. Anyway, we know where some of the "relief" is going.

Last year federal taxes on cigarettes amounted to more than 360 million dollars, and in addition the smokers in thirteen states paid a state tax ranging from 2 to 4 cents a package. Tennessee paid the highest rate, every package of 20 cigarettes carrying a 10 cent tax, of which 6 cents went to the federal government and 4 cents to the state. This is the only commodity we can think of on which the tax is greater than the cost of production. But gasoline is running a close second in some states.

Chief of Police Harper of Colorado Springs protested against the broadcasting of "third degree" methods applied to "Amos" of Amos 'n' Andy, saying that no up-to-date officer uses such methods. But if the chief followed the story through he must have learned that Amos was only dreaming. And it was a rather punk dream story at that.

The postal deficit for the last fiscal year was $146,066,189, Postmaster General Brown reports. This does not include the cost and operating expenses of federal buildings maintained by the Treasury Department for use of the postal service, and paid by the taxpayers.

Health was unusually good in the Navy during the past year, the death rate being only 3.31 per thousand. And what killed the most sailors? The same thing that killed the most land lubbers—the deadly automobile. Of a total of 389 Navy deaths, 233 were due to automobile accidents, and only 156 to all other causes.

Because a movie star gets temperamental and acts up a bit is no reason for cancelling a contract, according to a decision by the California Appellate Court. The DeMille Corporation fired Miss Jetta Goudal, alleging that she had frequent "outbursts of temperament." The court ruled that she was an artist and not bound by "slavish obedience" to her employers. An award of $34,531 damages by a lower court was upheld.

On his recent seventy-ninth birthday, Dr. Henry Van Dyke, noted author, did not give a recipe for long life, but did give a wholesome suggestion for a useful one, saying: "I try to keep busy with some job of my own, so I shall not become a busybody, a common fault."

When Chief Boatswain's Mate Isaac O. Castle at San Diego, Cal., wanted to re-enlist in the Navy at the age of 73, it was thought he was too old. However, he passed a rigid physical examination and was permitted to stay, thereby retaining the status of the oldest man in active service. He said: "Fourteen doctors examined me, and when they finished they said my blood pressure was better than theirs."

That patience and preserverance will ultimately find its reward is the belief of Mrs. Frankie Bryan, of Denver, who recently announced that she had chosen her ninth husband, a Mr. Flannigan. "At last I have found love," she declared.

The late C. E. Titman, of Philadelphia, lived for years in comparative poverty because he took a doctor's opinion too seriously. Fifteen years before his death, Titman received a legacy of $250,000. About the same time a physician told him he had less than a year to live, so he proceeded to spend his whole fortune in a few months. But he got well and worked for small wages the rest of his life.

Cub reporters are usually instructed to boil down their news stories. Following an admonition by his editor, a young London news-hound covered a tragedy thus: "Sir Edward Hopewell, a guest at Lady Panmore's ball, took a high-ball, his hat, his overcoat, his departure, a taxicab, a pistol from from his pocket, and finally his life."

One of those wonderful government bulletins says that "a trapped skunk can be kliled without disagreeable odorous consequences if it is approached slowly and quietly and given a sharp blow across the back with a stick." We merely pass along the information without vouching for its accuracy.

It's a trifle late for football postmortems, but it may interest some to know that Bob Monett of Michigan State headed the major college players in individual scores last season. In nine games he made 16 touchdowns, kicked for 28 points after touchdown, and made one field goal, for a total of 127 points.

When William Tyler Page completed fifty years of service with the House of Representatives in Washington a few days ago, in capacities ranging from page boy to clerk and acting speaker, he recalled many changes which had occurred in that time. In the old days Congressmen wore long tailed coats, stiff-bosomed shirts, high collars and stove-pipe hats. Now some of them wear skirts.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

George R. Hotchkiss, editor of the Doylestown, Pa., Daily Intelligencer, says:

The depression did us a good turn when it turned the attention of people of our American communities more impressively to the fact that right at home there is a great need of missionary work that has been lavished for years on strangers across the oceans.

Not so long ago I was interested in a report of a missionary society. First the speakers told about the great work in Far Eastern countries where American millions had built great hospitals and homes and schools in addition to taking the Gospel to those "benighted" la nds.

Then—oh, then, fellow Americans—the home mission spokeswoman held forth. Her picture was "not so good." It pictured the poor "mountain whites" of the South with only ramshackle one-room buildings for both school and church purposes and one hospital for a tremendous area.

But the tide is changing, a ministerial friend assures me. The churches are beginning to conclude that they have gone far beyond showing strangers beyond the seas the light—and that it is now up to them to carry on, while Americans turn their attention more to crying home needs for schools, hospitals, homes, decent housing and better social and health conditions.

But it is a job that is not merely up to the churches. When public affairs are carried on more economically, in a more business-like way, we will have hundreds of millions in this country to see that the needy—those who need education, spiritual direction and help along social and health lines—get it from members of the family who can see these needs and the "Acres of Diamonds" in the home field.

CAMPAIGN ON ROAD HOGS UNDER WAY CENTURY AGO

Road hogs were a problem in Springfield, Illinois, as early as 1831, only they were real porkers and not thoughtless or selfish motorists. The hundredth anniversary edition of the Illinois State Journal recalls that a century ago the newspaper was conducting a vigorous campaign against allowing hogs to run loose on public thoroughfares. As time went on the Journal had other traffic troubles to discuss, such as untethered cows, racing horses in the city streets, hitching racks in the shopping district, scorching bicycle riders. Now, it is hardly necessary to mention, the automobile is causing more worry than all the others combined.

FIRST SKYSCRAPER RAZED FOR GIANT NEW BUILDING

The first skyscraper ever built, the Home Insurance building in Chicago, is being razed. Erected in 1885 to a height of ten stories and later increased to twelve, this structure was the creation of William Le Baron Jenney, versatile engineer who built bridges for General Sherman's march to the sea and reputedly introduced pumpkin pie to Paris. Jenney got the idea from the bamboo huts of the Philippines, for which four standing trees supplied the framework.

On the site of the Home Insuranec building will rise the 42-story Field building, which will require 25,000 tons of steel, will contain a million square feet of floor space, and will be equipped with forty elevators.

Three-year-old Nancy's father had installed a new radio. Nancy listened with rapt attention to everything—music, speeches and station announcements. That night she knelt to say her "Now I lay me." At the end she paused a moment and then said:

"Tomorrow night at this time there will be another prayer."—Stray Stories.

There's a great future for some fellow who will invent a radio set which will automatically switch off all crooners, male quartettes and advertising ballyhoo.

LEGION BEGINS CAMPAIGN TO INCREASE EMPLOYMENT

A campaign to increase the present personnel of paid employees of every employer in California 10 per cent by February 1, has been launched by Van Hogan, state commander of the American Legion, followingthe receipt of a wire from National Commander Henry L. Stevens, Jr., outlining the Legion's program for immediate relief of the unemployment situation.

"The Legion is at war against unemployment," said Stevens in his telegram to Hogan. "I call on you to put in force immediately through every Post in California as the major activity the following program adopted by the Legion's employment committee.

"Each Post is to at once form a committee to contact every employer, large and small, in all lines of business. This committee is to urge that the employers' present paid personnel be increased 10 per cent by February 1. Service stars similar to those used in war time will be awarded by National Legion headquarters for those who do so."

On receipt of the wire, Commander Hogan and State Adjutant James K. Fisk immediately started the ball rolling to put the plan into effect. Area, district and Post commanders are being contacted and committees appointed to interview employers. It is expected that before January ends the campaign will have shown real accomplishments and put many more men now out of work on jobs.

PRECEDING EVENTS

Joe Barry, country youth in New York, ekes out a living as caretaker in a poor rooming house and accordion player in Louie Bertolini's restaurant. Lured by the open country, he spends a night in the fields, neglecting his duties. Next day Bertolini discharges him. A frequent visitor to Bertolini's offers him $10,000 to impersonate a "bootlegger" in trouble. It means a penitentiary sentence for Joe, and he hesitates. The man, "Martin," gives him $1,000 "on account." Next day Joe deposits $800 in country banks, giving his name as Joseph Bradley. A circus attracts him. Outside a tent he sees an accordion and is tempted to play it. A girl, Sue Dayton, niece of the owner, who admires the music, urges him to take a position with the circus.

The next half-hour was hazy for Joe Barry. He had come out to this small town prepared to sell something that was worthless, his physical freedom. Then suddenly this freedom had become paramount in his desires. Here he had found an opportunity to weld himself to something which thrilled him strangely, an unfettered life which fretted his imagination and tugged at him with ambitions which until today he had not realized that he possessed. Then Uncle Dan had asked his name and sent a skeleton of futility rattling within his memory. He could not do this! A contract had been made and a cash payment accepted to bind it by which he must go to prison!

It was Sue Dayton who brought him to a semblance of composure. They stood now on a street corner and Uncle Dan had departed. "Queer, isn't it, how things turn out?" said the girl. "Uncle Dan and I were just talking yesterday—that we simply must do something to buck up the performance. Then you came along and happened to notice that accordion and—well, here we are."

"Yes, that's right, isn't it?" Joe Barry forced a laugh. "Here we are!"

The girl became more business-like. "Did I understand correctly?" she asked. "You told Uncle Dan you could let him know in a few days?"

"Yes." The blur began to close in anew on Joe Barry. "You see, I sort of made arrangements about another job. I'll have to see if I can cancel it."

"I hope so," said the girl frankly. They were merely strolling now. "We'd like to have you with us."

"Thanks," said Joe Barry and it was not for Sue Dayton to understand the depths of that gratitude.

"You'll know, then, in a few days?" asked the girl.

"Yes"—it brought everything back—"Maybe I can find out tonight. I'm to see the man who's employing me tonight. There are some things to be settled. I sure hope I can get it fixed up. I'll come right back if I can."

Joe Barry was wondering how he could explain his change of attitude, how he could arrange for the return of the money he'd spent. It obsessed him; he spoke distractedly; events about him took on a strange form as if scenes from a sketchy drama, or the disconnected sequences of a dream. This was the time of times when he would have desired above all things to be utterly honest. It was galling to realize that with every word he was twisting himself deeper into a morass of deception. Suddenly he straightened, clear-eyed.

"I might as well tell you, Miss Dayton. I'm up against some problems in this thing," came grimly. "A man made me a proposition which he asked me to keep a secret. I've got to keep my word to him."

"Certainly." There was a hint of surprise in her tone.

"It rather ties me up—until I can see him and get my release. But I've been thinking it over. He made me this offer when I needed a job pretty badly. It's only fair to him to keep my part of the agreement until I can tell him I won't go through with it."

"Then you've decided?" Sue Dayton was plainly pleased. "Oh, that's grand! Someway, I think you were meant for a circus."

"I know I was!" Joe Barry laughed boyishly. "I didn't realize it until today. It's what I've wanted all my life."

Events were happier after that. Sue Dayton did most of the talking—mostly of the show. Then at last, they walked toward the circus grounds; twilight was coming, the townspeople, by twos and threes and steadily greater groups, were beginning to move toward the lot. They said good-by, ingenuously, with the hesitant frankness of young blood. Then grim again, lips thin, Joe Barry moved swiftly for the restaurant where he had left his bundle of old clothing, and after that to the station.

He lost track of time in the turmoil of his brain. Martin would come to his tiny room at ten o'clock. Joe would tell him what had happened, honestly, frankly. He'd make his offer of repayment for the money he had spent—nearly seventy-five dollars as he remembered it. Perhaps he could pawn his accordion for part of it—he could send the rest from the circus; Dan Dayton had promised him thirty-five a week at the start and more if he lived up to expectations. He'd tell Martin all that, and he'd try to convince him. But if the attorney tried to hold him to his bargain, there was a remedy. An inspiration had told Joe he could go to the police.

On the train, Joe Barry breathed deeper with something of relief. Martin wouldn't want that. Suddenly he was glad he had thought of that, for more reasons than his own safety. It had not occurred to him until the necessity of escape arose that he might be taking part in something approaching the criminal. Yes, he was glad he had thought of that, he told himself, as darkness came and the train rushed through the first of Jersey cities on the way to New York.

But it had to be done quickly—Joe knew that. He couldn't dilly-daily with Martin, now that he had thought of this new angle. Give him a chance, tell him the new viewpoint that he'd gained and then demand his release. There must be no wait of a few days to think it over. Then came a new fear: what if it had gone too far already? He erased that. Nothing had really been arranged yet; he didn't even know the name of the man whose place he was supposed to take, or exactly what he had done. Martin had said he would take that matter up after Joe had really made his decision.

"Well, I've made it!" the man mumbled.

The train seemed to drag after that. The instant it plunged into the tunnel on the way to the station, Joe was out of his seat in the grimy smoking car and waiting at the door. Then he was out and running, up the stairs and through the long, maze-like exits toward the street.

At last he was standing before the smear-faced old wooden building that was his home. Strangely weak in his knees, he opened the old door and started up the creaking stairway.

"Well, where you been this time?" It was a querulous, angry voice from the first landing. "No beds made, no rooms swept out—think we're goin' to keep on standin' for this?"

Joe Barry snapped a rejoinder and went on. He reached the door of his room, and pawing deep into his pocket for his personal key, sent it into the lock. The door yielded, a faint V of light went into the room from the gas jet in the hall. Joe Barry halted, his lower jaw loose in surprise. On the floor before him lay something metallic, something which had been pushed under the door. Then he sat on the bed and laughed.

It had been a joke! It had been a joke, that's all—just somebody playing a joke on him. They'd slipped up here during the day and returned that pass-key he had given Martin, by slipping it under the door. But as suddenly he sobered. Nobody would give a fellow a thousand dollars for a joke! He looked at the pass-key; suddenly he went to the gas jet and struck a match, illuminating the room. He searched the floor for a note. There was nothing. He jerked out his cheap watch, suddenly ticking with clocklike resonance. Five minutes to ten.

"I won't give him any leeway." Joe had slumped to the bed again, the pass-key still in his right hand. Again he studied it. Why had they slipped that under the door? Just come up here and slipped the thing under the door—

A minute passed; Joe confirmed it by looking at his watch. Then he began to count, one, two, three, four, five—he wondered how much a person would have to count before it all made a minute. He remembered how the old photographer back in Waverly used to count for time exposures, one thousand and one, one thousand and two, one thousand and three—

He started and listened. The stairs creaked. As if some one were moving upward. Or maybe it was just some one going down to the street—

Suddenly he jerked to his feet, as if jolted by electricity. Some one was at the door. Staccato, hollow pounding. Joe Barry moved forward. He swung wide the door.

Four men stood there, well-dressed men, staring quietly at him. One flipped his coat back, and the edge of a shield gleamed in the gaslight.

"You're Joe Barry," he said, more as a statement than as a question.

Joe could not answer. Two of the men dodged swiftly behind him.

"Fan him for a rod," came the coldly monotonous voice. "Better not take any chances."

Formed to Promote Trade

The international chamber of commerce was established in 1920 at a meeting of chief business interests of Belgium, France, Great Britain, Italy and the United States, and subsequently forty other nations joined. Its purpose was to promote the development of international trade, to remove or mitigate the effect of trade restrictions and to foster harmonious commercial relations among the nations.

Worried

L. Edmunds of Glendale writes: "I knew a little fellow whose mother made him go to church overmuch. He didn't know what it was all about but the solemnity of the service awed him.

"One day, after they had returned from church and the mother was giving the child a little additional Bible talk he interrupted her saying:

"'Close the door. Hallelujah might come in.'"—Los Angeles Times.

IT IS a far cry from the sub-zero temperatures and the snow-covered hills surrounding Lake Placid in northern New York to sunny California and the great stadium in Los Angeles where the 1932 Olympic games will be held this summer, but there is a connection between the two. Starting in Greece more than 3,000 years ago, Olympic games have been held at more or less regular intervals in many different countries during these 30 centuries, but this year for the first time in history the games will include sled dogs races.

Obviously it would be impossible for the sled dog races to be held at the same time and place as the other branches of Olympic competition. So that is why Lake Placid, N. Y., comes into the Olympic picture. It has one of the finest sled dogs racing courses on this continent and there on February 6 and 7 the teams of "huskies," driven by their fur-clad "mushers" will race 25 miles each day to win Olympic honors for the nations which they represent. Previous to the races at Lake Placid, elimination contests are being held in various parts of the country, notably in New England, to determine the American representatives in the Olympic finals, so these finals will see in the entry lists the names of some of the greatest sled dog drivers and teams in the world, pitting their speed and endurance against each other.

Outstanding among these will be such drivers as Leonard Seppala of Alaska, a native of Norway but now a naturalized American citizen, the man who with his heroic lead dog, Balto, thrilled the world a few years ago when they carried the diphtheria serum to stricken Nome; Emile St. Godard of Le Pas, Manitoba, a young French-Canadian, who has won three world championships; Frank Dupuis, another Canadian; Arthur T. Walden of New Hampshire, experienced Alaskan sourdough musher and dogmaster for Commander Byrd in the Antarctic; Walter Channing of Boston, who has twice defeated teams from both sides of the border in the annual races at Lake Placid; Charlie Lyman, the barber of Laconia, N. H., who has defeated veteran mushers, fur trappers and mail drivers of the Northland; Norman Vaughan, E. Goodale and Fred Crockett, "the three Musketeers of the South pole"; and many others.

Nor is sled dog racing a sport in which only men compete. Although Seppala, if successful in the trials, will represent his adopted country rather than his native land, Norway will probably be represented by a former American, the outstanding woman dog driver of the East. She is Mrs. Kaare Nansen, who before her marriage to the son of the famous Norwegian explorer, was Mrs. E. P. Ricker, Jr., a formidable competition to the men in many an exciting dog race. And a competitor from the West may be Miss Lydia ("Whistlin' Lyd") Hutchinson whose fame is intimately associated with the fame of the annual American Dog derby at Ashton, Idaho.

What horse racing is to the people of the more moderate climates in North America, sled dog racing is to the people of the north where the snows are deep, the winds bite cold and the ice-bound trails defy man and his principal beast of burden, the sled dog, to conquer them. Part timber wolf, part Labrador husky, the fierce shaggy malemutes won their place in history during the Klondike gold rush a third of a century ago. But their usefulness by no means ended with the end of the gold rush. Today in the land which lies "north of 53," day in and day out these dogs haul provisions, medicines, freight and supplies. They are an essential part of the fur trade for with their help the trappers patrol their 200-mile trap lines and bring back to civilization the furs which fashion decrees milady must wear.

The sport of sled dog racing is comparatively new but it has grown in favor and in extent more than most people realize. It began back in 1908 when the first of these picturesque sporting events was held over the 408-mile wilderness trail in Alaska from Nome to Candle creek and back. "Man's best friend" had made it possible for the golden riches of Alaska to be obtained, so the first All-Alaskan Sweepstake race was dedicated to the huskies. The plan was originated by a Nome lawyer, Albert Fink, a dog lover and experienced sourdough musher.

Assisted by a company of friends he raised a fund of $10,000 to be awarded to the winners and they spread the word of "race of the century" throughout the northland. The result was that Nome was packed with spectators and a long string of famous dogs and experienced mushers ready for the race. It was won by John Hegness, who ran the 408 miles across the bleak wilderness and back, after a steady grind, night and day, in 119 hours and 15 minutes—and most of the way he had to fight one of the most severe Arctic blizzards known in the history of Alaska.

Entered in the second race was a youthful hardware clerk whose name was destined, in later years, to occupy a romantic place in the annals of the northland. Scotty Allen, in odd hours at the store, had managed to assemble a team of dogs of doubtful value as racers. His entry was regarded as a joke; he was asked how he had got up the nerve to list them—but Scotty won the 1909 classic. In 1910 he was defeated by "Iron Man" John Johnson, who established a record never duplicated over that 408 miles, thanks to an exceptional team, his rare skill and a good break in weather. Johnson's time was 74 hours and 14 minutes, the fastest ever made in dog racing in the north.

But Scotty Allen was not discouraged. Back he came for another trial in 1911, and cut two hours off his previous record. He is the only man who ran in more than four All-Alaskan Sweepstakes—the first, second, third and eighth and final—and he won the distinction of always finishing a race, irrespective of weather or condition of his dogs. In 1915 Scotty took 440 Alaskan dogs to France; for distinguished service he was decorated by the French government with the Croix de Guerre.

The same world conflict that claimed Allen drew the other men of Alaska—and the ranks of the racers became so depleted that it was impossible to hold the big race. Thus the 1916 event became the last. During that winter a company of sourdoughs met in Le Pas, Man. Dog race talk was revived. It was suggested that Le Pas hold one and the date was set for late that winter, over a 150-mile course from Le Pas to Flin Flon, mushroom mining town, and back.

Few preparations were made; the drivers used ordinary dogs; they themselves were unskilled in the art of racing, and a bitter struggle followed across that trackless snowy waste in quest of the $500 prize and the title of champion. But it turned out to be a singularly exciting race. The winner had an accident that staved in two ribs; but he hung on until the finish. From that day to this Le Pas has staged each winter one of the most thrilling races and has developed some of the finest men and teams in the game, most famous of whom is their own boy, St. Godard.

Since that time the growth of the dog derby idea has been rapid until now such races are held in different parts of the United States, Canada and Alaska. Outstanding among them, besides the one at Le Pas already mentioned, are the annual races at Poland Spring, Maine; Laconia, N. H.; Ashton, Idaho; Prince Albert, Saskatchewan; Quebec, and Fairbanks Alaska.

The American Dog derby at Ashton, Idaho, is run each year on Washington's birthday over a 25-mile course, and attracts a large crowd of spectators from all over the Northwest.

Perhaps the best known of all the dog races is the Eastern International Dog derby held at Quebec during the third week in February each year where "world championships" are awarded the winners. There assemble the winners of the other contests, to race over a course of about 120 miles, run in heats of 40 miles a day.

Quebec attracts the best drivers and teams from all parts of America, and rivalry runs high during the three days, attaining a fever heat on the last day of the race. The winner of the world's championship in the first international was Arthur T. Walden, of New Hampshire, experienced Alaskan sourdough musher, who started trailing dogs across the frozen wilderness back in 1896, during the gold rush, and who was dogmaster with Commander Byrd in the Antarctic.

In 1923 the international was won by a French Canadian, Jean Lebel, of Quebec, much to the elation of the Canadians. Earl Brydges, of Le Pas, took the next championship, and into the arena of the 1925 derby stepped young Emile St. Godard, still in his teens to begin his unparelleled record in dog racing. He is now the only man who has won three championships. Frank Dupuis won the 1926 race over St. Godard by a margin so narrow as to make the race one of the most thrilling, and to establish a new time on the trail. St. Godard won the 1925, 1927 and 1928 races. In 1929 Leonhard Seppala entered with a string of seven wonderful dogs. This was the third year he had made a determined bid to win the world's championship, and from start to finish, Seppala ran one of the most spectacular races ever seen at Quebec—or anywhere else. Not only did he defeat St. Godard by about an hour, but he broke St. Godard's own world's record, and again put the Americans into the game. Dupuis took second honors and St. Godard came trailing in third. In the opinion of the judges, Seppala's Siberians completed the 123-mile grind fresher than any racers they had ever seen; and they were awarded the condition prize, something unusual in the annals of dog races. Usually this award goes to some driver who trails in later and who has saved his dogs in the mad dash over the snow.

It is such drivers and such dogs as these who will compete in the Olympic contests at Lake Placid within the next few weeks.

The sled dogs are trained for their life work just as soon as they are able to walk; they are tied up and soon acquire the habit of pulling. At about sixty days of age they are given over to the care of boys, who harness them to small sleds or wagons. The dogs appear to be willing to do this play-acting in the harness, and come to enjoy the pastime.

Any number of dogs may be used in a team, although 15 is about the limit.

"JESUS' MESSAGE TO THE TIRED MAN"

"Jesus' Message to the Tired Man" is the topic of the sermon to be preached on Sunday evening, January 24, in the Methodist church. More work and less pay is the quickest way to break down our present high standard of living. The really serious question is, "Haw many men and their families will also break under the strain? Is there rest for the weary? Is there a yoke that is easy to bear or a burden that is light?"

Evangelism

The Methodist church has always been essentially evangelistic. If ever this theme needed stressing, we believe it is now. From now until Easter it is our aim to bring the Gospel urgently to the attention of all men in this community. We believe this is the best, if not the only, way out of our difficulties, and solution to our problems. It is the greatest need of both people and church.

Let no one fear to begin the Christian life. Unlimited backing is theirs. God never gives a command without giving it the power to obey.

A Scotch lord gave his servant, Donald, a little farm. He said:

"Donald, I am going to give you this property that you may work it yourself, and spend the rest of your life on your own property."

Donald replied: "It is nae gude to gie me the farm; I have nae capital to stock it."

His lordship looked at him, and said: "I think I can manage to stock it also."

"Oh, well," said Donald, "if it's you and me for it, I think we will manage."

JUDGE BUCK CELEBRATES EIGHTY-FIFTH BIRTHDAY

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, JANUARY 15, 1932 NUMBER 25

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Tom: "Are Paul and Alice as inseperable as ever?"

Jerry: "No; they're married now."

"I have a book you ought to read, my dear. Shall I lend it to you?"

"Heavens, no, darling! I can't even find time to read the books I ought to."

"ABERDEEN," the Coal that satisfies.

"I want an economical, comfortable machine," demanded the prospective purchaser, "and I don't want to pay more than $300 for it."

"Ah, yes," answered the auto salesman, "what you want is a four-door enclosed bicycle."

You will find about as many people who think as you think as you will who look like you.

"A board and a nail
"And a can of paint
Make many a house
Look new — that ain't.

Ignorance is the mother of suspicion, hate, back-biting, lies, slander and the whole brood of evil imaginations that keep people apart.

To drive a nail through a plaster wall without injury to the wall, dip in hot water first. This will prevent it from breaking away the wall.

When a community begins to believe in itself, it progresses.

If we can not serve you as well as anyone else, we don't expect your orders.

A certain amount of opposition is a great help to a man. "Kites rise against and not with the wind."

Dog Catcher: "Do your dogs have licenses?"

Small Boy: "Yes, sir, they're just covered with them."

"STERLING," the Wall Board of quality.

Husband: "Don't sing that song 'Going Through the Rye,' please.

Wife: "Why not?"

Husband: "Because it reminds me that I have almost gone through mine."
